A new weather system is approaching the Pacific Northwest bringing rain and unseasonably low snow levels to northern California, Oregon, Washington and Idaho. High temperatures will range from the 30's to 40's in the Pacific Northwest to the 60's and 70's in the desert Southwest.

Widespread thunderstorms and severe weather conditions will extend from Dallas, TX into the northern Plains. Kansas and Nebraska will experience strong winds and a high risk of tornado activity. Daytime high temperatures are forecasted to be in the mid 40's to the mid 50's in the northern portion of the region, 60 to 70 from western Texas through Illinois, and the upper 80's to low 90's in southern Texas.

The South will experience partly cloudy skies and a chance for isolated thunderstorms. A high pressure system will begin to build over the Atlantic. High temperatures will range from the 60's to 70's in the northern half of the area and in the 80's throughout the rest of the region.

A low pressure system moving across the Northeast bringing rain showers over Washington, DC and northward. Rain should change to snow across Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine. Daytime high temperatures will be in the 40's from Maine to Boston, in the 50's through the middle of the area, and in the 60's from New Jersey southward.
