Predictive Service Discussion: The off shore, easterly wind event across Oregon and northern California will begin to weaken as a strong, fast-moving cold front drops south from British Columbia into Washington and the Northern Rockies. The prefrontal flow will become westerly by afternoon. Elsewhere, a flat westerly flow will continue across the remainder of the country. A departing cold front will bring widespread showers to New England, and a dissipating stationary front will allow for scattered showers and storms to develop along the Gulf Coast.

LEAD Time

Developing a Learning Organization

Leadership Category

Leaders evaluate performance at all levels to understand the causal factors of successes and failures. All those involved learn incrementally, applying today's lessons to the next assignment. This focus on continuous improvement brings with it a responsibility to share lessons learned throughout the organization.

In a learning organization, leaders treat honest mistakes as opportunities to learn and do better next time. Understanding that failure is a part of learning, they establish command climates in which followers are motivated by desire to succeed rather than fear of failure. At the crew level, conducting regular After Action Reviews is one of the most powerful tools a leader has for building effective and cohesive teams.

Discussion Points:

- Discuss the relationship between developing a learning organization and safety.
- What happens when honest mistakes are punished rather than used as a learning opportunity?
- How are mistakes and failure dealt with within your crew / organization?
- What was your crew's or organization's most recent learning moment?
